

MODULE 4, PART 6

Next steps for learning
how to get maps online

Feds prepare to ramp up migrant detention in Texas

There are more than 50 facilities in Texas that are authorized to hold migrant adults, families and children for more than three days, and at least seven more could be coming. The new facilities, including three on military bases, would nearly double the capacity statewide.

In August, facilities authorized for prolonged detention have beds for at least 22,547 migrants.

Families Children Adults

With approval and completion of new facilities that number could increase to about 40,000 migrants

Families Children Adults

Where are these facilities located?

Though the largest concentration is in El Paso, the Rio Grande Valley and Houston, migrant facilities are spread throughout the state. The largest new facility is proposed for the Goodfellow Air Force Base in San Angelo, which will hold up to 11,500 people.

ai2html

```

ai2html-settings
image_format: jpg
responsiveness: fixed output: one-file
html_output_path: ../templates/ai2html-output/
html_output_extension: .html
image_output_path: ../assets/images
image_source_path: [static/assets/images/
jpg_quality: 70

```

```

ai2html-text
filename: fed-20180808

```

```

ai2html-css

```

```

#g-{{filename}}-630 {
display: block;
margin: 0 auto;
}

```

```

#g-{{filename}}-360 {
display: none;
margin: 0 auto;
}

```

```

@media (max-width: 630px) {
#g-{{filename}}-630 {
display: none;
}
#g-{{filename}}-360 {
display: block;
}
}

```

Feds prepare to ramp up migrant detention in Texas

There are more than 50 facilities in Texas that are authorized to hold migrant adults, families and children for more than three days, and at least seven more could be coming. The new facilities, including three on military bases, would nearly double the capacity statewide.

In August, facilities authorized for prolonged detention have beds for at least 22,560 migrants.

With approval and completion of new facilities, that number could increase to about 40,000 migrants

Where are these facilities located?

Though the largest concentration is in El Paso, the Rio Grande Valley and Houston, migrant facilities are spread throughout the state. The largest new facility is proposed for the Goodfellow Air Force Base in San Angelo, which will hold up to 11,500 people.

Sources: U.S. Immigrations & Customs Enforcement, Texas Health and Human Services Commission, National Justice Center and Tribune reports
Note: Adult facilities mapped do not include those that may temporarily hold migrants for less than 72 hours. Capacity numbers are current as of November 2017, unless more recent numbers were available.

Feds prepare to ramp up migrant detention in Texas

There are more than 50 facilities in Texas that are authorized to hold migrant adults, families and children for more than three days, and at least seven more could be coming. The new facilities, including three on military bases, would nearly double the capacity statewide.

In August, facilities authorized for prolonged detention can house at least 22,560 migrants.

With approval and completion of new facilities, that number could increase to about 40,000 migrants

Where are these facilities located?

Though the largest concentration is in El Paso, the Rio Grande Valley and Houston, migrant facilities are spread throughout the state. The largest new facility is proposed for the Goodfellow Air Force Base in San Angelo, which could hold up to 11,500 people.

Sources: U.S. Immigrations & Customs Enforcement, Texas Health and Human Services Commission, National Justice Center and Tribune reports
Note: Adult facilities mapped do not include those that may temporarily hold migrants for less than 72 hours. Capacity numbers are current as of November 2017, unless more recent numbers were available.

How integrated is your city?

Search for a city, address or zip code

CHOOSE A YEAR

1990

2000

2010

2016*

SELECT

Race

Diversity

FILTER

Black

White

Asian

Hispanic

Native

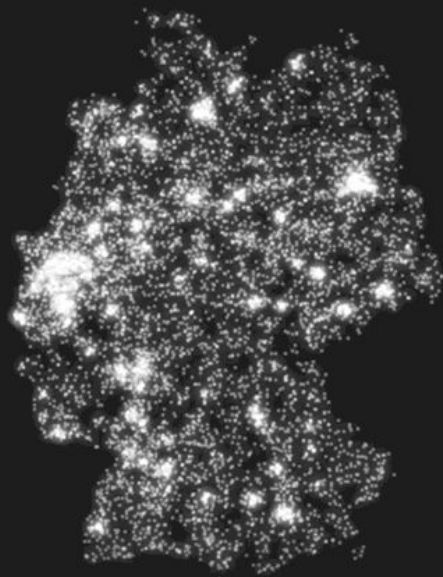

Other

● Dots represent population density

* 2016 figures are estimates

Washington
D.C.

To find out more about rural and urban attitudes,
it is first necessary to answer a simple question:
Where do Germans actually live?

Is this prejudice correct?

The smaller the community, the happier its residents

That's true!

No way!

The share of people in Germany who are satisfied with their lives, in other words, is the same no matter where they live, in villages, towns, small cities or large cities. Quite an amazing discovery when you consider that people in the countryside sleep much better than those in the city do. Or is that just a prejudice?

Data-Driven Documents

Happy mapping!